strikers declared that they went a strike as a mutual protest against the present wage scale for the men on the charge floor. They were getting from $1.75 to $2 a day, and they now demand from $2 to $2.25 per day. Superintendent Morton of the smelter said last night that no petition had been received from the men asking for an increase in pay, and that the first intimation he received that such was de-sired was when he saw written on the walls of the smelter in chalk yesterday the numerals "2.25." This he took to mean that perhaps the men wanted more money.

The duty of the charge floor crew is to feed the furnaces of the smelter, and for that reason their position, though unskilled, is one of the most important in the smelter. If all three shifts on this floor go out and remain out for twenty-four hours the entire plant will have to shut down, because the furnaces will freeze and the loss to the smelter will be serious.
